Please briefly explain how this break would benefit you	A break away together would give me the opportunity to feel like a partner again. I think we are both greiving a life we might have had and coming to terms with our new reality. It would allow me to rest properly, recover from burnout, and spend timeas partners rather than as carer and cared-for.
Please briefly explain why you're unable to fund this break yourself?	I have accrued approximately £8,000 of debt as a direct result of supporting them over the last 4 years, and the household has no savings. They run their own business from home but does not generate sufficient income for them to draw a salary yet, so household income is limited to my modest earnings and their PIP, set against disability-related costs. We feel like we are in the most tricky financial point of our lives, and feel that once we get the support system set up around them things will get easier. We recently moved into an accessible home, which was necessary but expensive, and the associated costs have added further pressure. We are also still waiting for a (now agreed) care package from the council after more than ten months, meaning all care continues to be provided by me on an unpaid basis, with no statutory support to offset the financial or practical load. A break of this kind is simply not something we could fund ourselves in these circumstances. We are both frazzled and our relationship is suffering. We have researched accessible holiday options somewhere which stays warm during the winter and has accessible nature trails and excursions, something we both love.

About Applicant

Please select all conditions or illnesses that apply?	Mobility (for example walking short distances or climbing stairs) Dexterity (for example lifting and carrying objects, using a keyboard) Mental health
Brief Description of Disability	My partner has a complex, fluctuating condition called Ehlers Danlos Syndrome, affecting their mobility, energy and capacity for everyday activity. They need support with personal care, household tasks and getting around, and use an electric wheelchair. Their condition is unpredictable: they can have flare ups, cannot be left alone, and need close support whenever outside the home. They are largely housebound and experience significant social isolation as a result. They are still waiting for an (agreed) care package from the council, so I currently provide all of this support as their unpaid partner-carer and have done for 4 years.
Brief Description of Care Support Received or Provided	Personal care (washing, dressing, toileting, feeding) Mobility assistance (helping them move around, transfers, getting in/out of bed) Medication management (administering, reminding, organizing) Household tasks (cooking, cleaning, shopping, laundry) Managing appointments and healthcare coordination Financial and administrative support Emotional support and companionship Supervision for safety (ensuring they don't come to harm) Night-time care (waking during the night to provide care) I provide personal care with washing their hair, dressing, cooking, and remain present day and night, as they cannot be left alone due to falls and hypoglycaemic flares.
As a carer, on average how many hours of support do you provide a week?	35 – 59 hours

Financial Eligibility

Benefit Provider
Approximate Household Income	£15,000 - £25,000
If you have significant care costs, please briefly explain	Yes Their disability-related costs currently amount to approximately £1100 per month, excluding general living costs. This includes costs such as specialist medical appointments or medicines, travel to and from appointments in different parts of the country, charging the electric wheelchair, therapies for pain/fatigue/flare ups, dietary requirements, insurance premiums etc etc!
Savings over £6,000?	No

Please briefly explain how this break would benefit you	Warmth eases my joints considerably, so a break somewhere warm would bring real relief from pain. It would give me time outdoors, as we have researched accessible trails and excursions I can make in my chair, which I rarely have while largely housebound, and time with my partner as a partner rather than a carer.
Please briefly explain why you're unable to fund this break yourself?	I have no capacity to fund a break myself. My PIP is £604.93 per month and my business does not generate enough income for me to draw a salary, so my household relies on my partner's part-time earnings while they care for me. Against this, my disability-related costs are mounting up. We have no savings, and my partner has taken on approximately £8,000 of debt as a direct result of supporting me. Some of that debt comes from a holiday we took last year. It was the first time we had tested whether travel was possible for me, and it worked — with adaptations and airport assistance, I was able to manage it. It was genuinely wonderful for our relationship, giving us time together as partners and some respite after 4 years of my disability progressing and advocating for support from the health and social care system, but the joy of it was worth a great deal. We have since moved into an accessible home, which was necessary but costly, and we are still waiting for a care package from the council after more than ten months. Without statutory support, everything falls on us. We now know a break is possible for me — we simply cannot afford to make it

About Applicant

Please select all conditions or illnesses that apply?	Mobility (for example walking short distances or climbing stairs) Dexterity (for example lifting and carrying objects, using a keyboard) Memory Mental health Stamina or breathing or fatigue
Brief Description of Disability	I have Ehlers Danlos Syndrome and associated comorbidities. My condition fluctuates unpredictably and affects almost every part of daily life. I need support with washing, dressing, cooking and moving around outside the home, and I use a wheelchair for anything beyond a few steps. Because I can faint or fall, I cannot be left on my own at any point, day or night. I have a falls monitor. This means I am largely housebound and unable to go to the shops or into the community independently. I am a young person and want to be part of the world around me, but at present I rely on my partner as an unpaid carer while I wait for a care package.
Brief Description of Care Support Received or Provided	I need support with some personal care, including washing my hair and dressing, and with preparing food and reminding to eat and take my medication. I need help moving around outside of the home safely and cannot manage stairs. Household tasks such as cooking, cleaning and laundry are beyond what I can do. Beyond practical tasks, I need someone present at all times. My condition can deteriorate suddenly, and I have a history of falls and fainting episodes where I have been found on the floor. This means I need continuous company, including overnight, so that someone can respond immediately if something happens. Outside the home, I cannot travel alone and need someone with me at all times due to pain, fatigue and anxiety as a result of losing my mobility in my 30s. At present all of this is provided by my partner, as I am still waiting for a care package.

Approximate Household Income	£15,000 - £25,000
If you have significant care costs, please briefly explain	YesMy disability related costs come to approx £1100 per month, and I am currently working part-time and putting any profits back into my business. I created this business to have a lifeline when my disability progresses, but at the moment the financial pressure is all on my partner and their small salary and my PIP. We cannot access UC as my partner earns just over the limit. With no care package in place after ten months, the shortfall between what I need and what is funded falls on my household, which has no savings.
Savings over £6,000?	No

Please briefly explain how this break would benefit you	I have not had a holiday for 7 years and rarely leave the house because of their needs and behaviours. The same challenges mean I am also unable to have family or friends visit our home. This break would give me something positive to look forward to and the chance to see nearby family through short, more manageable visits.
Please briefly explain why you're unable to fund this break yourself?	As their full-time unpaid family carer, I am unable to undertake paid employment because of the level of care and supervision they requires. I also care for my disabled child, so our family's caring responsibilities are substantial. The additional costs of arranging a suitable, safe holiday for them, including accessible accommodation and transport, make a respite break difficult for us to afford without financial assistance.

Please briefly explain how this break would benefit you	They have not had a holiday in 7 years, they rarely goes out because them disability and behavioural needs make outings difficult. A quiet, secluded break would help them enjoy nature, relax and spend short, manageable visits with family
Please briefly explain why you're unable to fund this break yourself?	They rely on a limited income and family support due to the impact of their disability. As their full-time unpaid family carer, I am unable to undertake paid employment because of the level of care and supervision they requires. I also care for their disabled sibling, whose needs further limit my ability to work. In addition, the type of accommodation suitable for their needs is more expensive than a standard holiday, as they requires a quiet, secluded environment. Financial assistance would make this rare respite break possible and help meet the additional costs associated with them disability.

Please briefly explain how this break would benefit you	This break would give me time to rest and recover from the physical and emotional demands of caring for my parent while balancing work and financial pressures. It would reduce stress, improve my wellbeing and give us precious time to make positive memories together while they is well enough to enjoy them.
Please briefly explain why you're unable to fund this break yourself?	Due to my parent's disabilities and high care needs, I can only work 3½ days a week so I can care for and support them. I help with them personal care, mobility, medication, appointments and daily living, leaving little opportunity to increase my income. I am in debt, live from paycheck to paycheck and have no savings. The constant financial pressure affects both my parent's and my mental wellbeing, adding to our stress and low mood at a time when we are both trying to recover. Following my parent's recent four-month hospital stay, we desperately need a break, but it is simply beyond our means. A grant would give us the opportunity to rest, recover and create precious memories together.

Brief Description of Disability	My parent has severe mobility and mental health difficulties which greatly affect them daily life. Following a stroke, they are unsteady on their feet, needs support when walking and uses mobility aids. Arthritis causes pain in their hands, back and knees, making everyday tasks difficult. They have recently spent four months in hospital under the Mental Health Act due to severe depression with psychosis and is preparing to return home. A short accessible holiday would support their recovery, improve their wellbeing and give us precious time together to create positive memories.
Brief Description of Care Support Received or Provided	Personal care (washing, dressing, toileting, feeding) Mobility assistance (helping them move around, transfers, getting in/out of bed) Medication management (administering, reminding, organizing) Household tasks (cooking, cleaning, shopping, laundry) Managing appointments and healthcare coordination Financial and administrative support Emotional support and companionship Supervision for safety (ensuring they don't come to harm) Communication support (speaking for them, interpreting their needs) Night-time care (waking during the night to provide care) I help my parent dress, walk safely or use their wheelchair, manage medication, prepare meals and provide personal care. They cannot be left alone.

Please briefly explain how this break would benefit you	This break would provide emotional respite, relaxation and quality time with my child after a very difficult period. As I have small vessel disease affecting my memory, it feels especially important to create positive memories together while I am still able to fully enjoy and remember them.
Please briefly explain why you're unable to fund this break yourself?	Due to disability-related costs, debt, limited income and caring responsibilities, funding an accessible break independently is very difficult. Accessible accommodation and wheelchair-friendly travel increase costs significantly.

Brief Description of Disability	My mobility and daily functioning are affected by ongoing health conditions and the effects of a previous stroke. I experience fatigue, reduced mobility and difficulty walking longer distances. I can walk short distances with a frame or walker but rely on a wheelchair for longer outings. I have also experienced recent health challenges requiring hospital admission, which have affected my confidence, wellbeing and memory. I need support from carers and family with appointments, meals and everyday activities.

Brief Description of Care Support Received or Provided	I require support with mobility, fatigue and day-to-day activities. I use a walker/frame for short distances and a wheelchair for longer outings due to reduced mobility and fatigue following a stroke and ongoing health conditions. I receive support from carers three times a day and additional support from my child, who is also my carer. they assists with appointments, shopping, meals, emotional support and helping manage my wellbeing and daily needs. For travel, I would require accessible accommodation, wheelchair-friendly transport and minimal walking distances.
